FITZ JOHN PORTER. Of the family of Fitz John Porter a writer in the Boston Post says: "His father, the fate Captain John Porter a highly distinguished officer of the navy, died in command of the receiving ship at died in command of the receiving ship at Charlestown Kavy Yurd, while General Porter was a mere boy. After graduating at West Point with honor, Porter went through the war in Mexico, where he was brevetted to a major for lifs hravery and distinguished services. While in Mexico his brother David, a lientenant in the army died of fever at Vera Curz. More tecently, his only remaining brother, second officer of the United States ship Levant was fost on that vessel. Time his father and brother have yielded their lives in the service of their country, and he only has been left to a widowed mother, as her support and staff in her old age."

The letter of which the above is an extract represents Gen. Porter as bravely and ably doing the duties of a soldier in the virily of the Union against the rebellion, until Gen. Pope took command of the army of the Potonase and, with his corps, he found himself subject to the orders of that officer. It was during that campaign that the acts of disobedience, or Insubordination took place for which he was cashlered, deprived of his commission and forever exchaled from all offices of honor or emolument in the United States,

The flist of these was when he was ordered to join Pope at Bristoc Station on the morning of Aug. 28, 1862. Receiving the order in the evening, he took the responsibility to delay his murch beyond the hour appointed. For this, the apology is that his troops were tired and the roads were bad; and that it was found in the morning that his services were not needed at Briston Another order which he failed to comply with required him to march to Gainesville to join the forces of Sigel and Hel atzelman, supposed by Pope to be there, but as they were four miles distant, and to the cast therefrom, held in cluck by Jackson, every step taken in the prescribed direction would have removed Poster further from the junction, besides rendering it difficult for him to reach Bull Run that night as ordered. This order contained the following: "If any considerable advantages areto be gained by departing from this order it will not be strictly corried out." Potter, acting under the discretion allowed remained where he was. On the evening of the same day, another order was received from Gen. Pope directing Porter to take a liao of march which would bring him on the right flank of the enemy, supposed by Pope to be Jackson's corps, Pope believing that Longstreet was some ferty lanus distant, wherens by ten o'cleck, and certainly by moon of that day, all of Longstreet's corps of about forty thousand men, had joined Jackson and been posted on his right flank, which Porter was ordered to attach. Disobedience of this order was the principal charge brought against Porter, and on this he was convict-

On the trial of Perfer, Pope and his wit nesses testified that the only enemy in front of Porter was a small body of troops, which in their judgment. Porter could have easily defented. They had not the remotest idea netwied. They had not the remotest idea that the immelse force of Longstreet, at least three to one of that of Porter, was in his front, and hidden from view by woods. Parter had made this discovery. Prisoners taken by him, and the observation of General Bulord had given him the knowledge of tids fact, and that to follow out the order would be to the extent of folly if not crime. He had attenuted to communicate order would be to the extent of folly if not caline. He had attempted to communicate with MeDowell and Sigel; but his messengers ran into the enemy. He maintained his ground it order to hold Longstreet in check as long as possible, and thus prevent him from attacking the left flank and rear of Pope's army, as it was intended for him to do by Genstal Lee.

No reasonable man but must appland Porter for his great judgement in this antier as well as for his military skill in effecting afterwards a site refreat hefore the army of Longstreet. Had he followed the order of Popu, his coaps would have met that of Longstreet full in front. The General leasures stated, that had Parter allacked him with a force less than twenty-five thousand men, the corps of Porter would impuestionally five bours. men, the corps of Porter would unquestion abiy have been destroyed.

We have given this condensed view of the case of Porter from a journal that has may see what he is accused of and the mest favorable construction that can be put upon the facts. It is true that " where Porter led, his topops were ready to follow, to make any specifices demanded of them by him"; and they were auxious to go where he refered to lead and to make sacrifices which he would not undergo. The galit must be didle it to apalogize for, when Mr. Lincoln feit that the penalty was too light. Porter has been condemned by the almost universal voice of loyalty. Yet if there is any show of injustice, the same voice will classor to have it rectified,

"Ah! my unclo Henry I" cried the Empress, running up to the Doke d'Aumale, and she embraced him. "And Joinville!" she added, contracing him also. . Then she began talking about America, but frequently looked around as if in terror, and at moments she started under apparently the apprehension that some one was about to stab her from behind. She spoke of the Fenian movement in the United States, of Paraguay, and Brazil, but said not a word about Mexico. She evidently wanted to bring the two Princes to speak of that country, but did not succeed. At last she took leave of them with a certain degree of coldness; sha was evidently vexed that they did not speak of what she had most at heart.

THE CHIER USER BY RENER SPIES DUIS SO THE WAR - A person entitled to know something about the subject informs the New York Times that one of the most intricate and valuable ciphers used by the rebel government in communicating with their spies in the North, in the early times of the war, consisted merely in the application of the Sunscrit alphabet to the spelling of English words-that is to say, the words used in the secret dispatches were English. In this city an address will be delivered at but the Sanscrit characters were employed the First Baptist Church by Rev. J. D. Ludn their formation. All that was necessary low of Baston and there will be other ap for any person, to read and understand the dispatches, was simply for him to learn the Sanscrit alphabet, which can be done very quickly; but of course our officers were of in that secret. As the number of persons in this country who know Sauscrit is exceedingly small, the reliels carried on this ingenious system for a long time with impunity.
